FLORES DE VERÃO White Wine Product of Portugal

Portugal's best white wine vineyards are found seaside, extending along the Atlantic Coast – a cool, windy region. The proximity to the ocean works to cool down vineyards that would otherwise produce heavy, boring wines as a result of too much heat and sun exposure. The Fernão Pires variety, indigenous to Portugal, is found nowhere else in the country, as it absolutely needs this maritime influence to produce the style of wine that the locals love to eat with their seafood – zesty and bright, with a distinct salinity. Flores De Verão is succulent and fresh, showing Fuji apple, pear and ripe apple flavors, with tropical fruit notes. Fittingly, the long finish of anise and savory herb comes in waves, so grab your sunscreen and parasol and kick back with a glass of this uniquely Portuguese white wine.

Italy is renowned worldwide for its history of viticulture and tradition of fine wine production, a dynamic country where old world meets new, and this juicy, lip-smacking red blend takes vinous inspiration from both. The Old World character expresses itself in a zesty, food friendly personality, while the New World provides fruity punch and a velvety texture to this smooth, complex Italian blend.

We work directly with the growers that produce this wine in an effort to make sure that this Italian Red is generous and easy drinking, reflecting the hard work and passion with which the grapes are grown. Finding the perfect balance between too heavy and too light, too sweet and too dry, this is a wine of personality and charm, just like the timeless, exalted country where it is grown.
